SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF

W. C. ALLISON'S
PATENT JOINT
Oil Well Tubing.

This Superior Tubing is furnished with heavy sockets, and is cut with a ratcheting screw thread, corresponding exactly with the thread in the socket, so that when screwed up it has a bearing the whole length of the joint, and the absence of a deep thread on the tube at the end of the socket obviates the liability to break at that point from the vibration caused by the action of the pump.

Each length and socket is stamped with our trade mark, and is carefully tested before shipment with a hydraulic pressure of 1,200 pounds to the square inch.

LAP-WELDED OIL WELL Tubing & Casing.
We would call the particular attention of dealers and producers to this make of Tubing and Casing. One of the important features in the manufacture of our Tubing is, that the Lap and the Weld
are made perfectly straight, smooth and uniform, thereby giving equal and great strength to the casing throughout.
Each joint carefully inspected, reamed at end, and proved with the acetone test a hydraulic pressure of 1,200 pounds to the square inch before shipment.

The Mouse and His Friends—
A Little Story for Little Readers.

BY ANNIE MOORE
From the Young Folks for October.

"Twas a winter night. The cold wind whistled loud and shrill, and the fire mantels fell on all around.

"But the children were warm. A cold breeze on the hearth, and lighted up the blue audrons and bright tins wonderfully. A streak of pale moonlight lay across the floor, and merry little voices were singing on the hearth, while the old clock beat time for him.

"Click, tick, tick, sing," said the clock, and the children sang. He sang of the beautiful summer time and the warm, glowing meadow.

"A mouse put his head out of his hole. "Don't sing, and the clock sang. "Hullo," said the mouse, "we are waiting for you. Come through the moonlight for good luck."

"What good luck can there be for three-legged mice?" said the children, as he limped in and took a seat before the fire.

"O, don't be unhappy," said the cricket. "It will grow angry."

"Never!" said the mouse.

"Somebody will mend it," said the table. "I have had two legs broken off about a hundred times."

"Impossible," said the Mouse. "I wish that old trap was here."

"My dear fellow," interrupted the Trap, "don't say such things. I've nothing against you. It was only in the way of my business."

"Is it your business to nip off my leg?" said the Mouse, in a passion.

"No," said the Trap. "If you will, I can," said the Trap. "That's what I am here for."

"I wish you were not here, then," said the Mouse. "It was very pleasant before you came."

"It was indeed," said the Cricket. "You used to come and see us every night, and I used to crick about as lively as a cricket, almost."

"My dancing days are over now," said the poor Mouse.

"Don't say so. Don't be down-hearted," said the Cricket. "Here, blaze away, you Fire, and make it look cheerful."

"You'll find something to eat in the cupboard and the table," said the Broom.

"Some split peas and a bit of corn. Cook tried to make me sweep them away, but I wouldn't."

"An old Broom knows where the crumbs are," said the Cricket.

"You are very kind," said the Mouse, as he went under the table and brought out the feast.

"How delicious," said he, as he nibbled away. "It is a long time since I tasted a split pea."

"Have some more," cried the Trap.

"No, thank you," said the Mouse.

"Another word and I'll sweep you away," So the Trap said no more.

"Come," said the cricket, "now tell us some of your old tales and the rule."

"Where did I leave off?" asked the Mouse.

"She didn't like cats," replied the Cricket.

"Cats? Yes. Polly didn't like cats," resumed the Mouse. "She threw water at them, and drove them away whenever they came near the house. So we were very much pleased to see the cats. She said she couldn't tell what ever had become of it, and that loss was our gain. When she went out of an evening, she always took a little milk and a bit of bread from the shed and go straight into the pantry and help ourselves to cheese and pie and everything good.

"I was then leaving the doors open," said the Broom.

"No," said the Mouse. "If you want to go in now, you must gain a hole, and by the time you get it gnawed they'll find it out. I'll tell you a story that'll stop up the one I have made behind the door."

"But if I can help it," said the Broom. "I try to hide it."

"Thank you," replied the Mouse. "I have some friends."

"What friends?" asked the Cricket.

"She always left the bread box open a little," continued the Mouse, "so that we could easily go in and out of it. We never nibbled a whole loaf or a whole pie. Take just what we want, and the rule."

"I wish I had been here before," said the Cricket.

"Ah, well, sighed the Mouse, "it was too late. Accidents happen in life. Once a cousin of mine fell into a deep pail of milk and with all we could do we couldn't get him out. I ran around the edge of the pail as much as fifty times, but I came on slipping in myself, but it did no good. We had to leave him there with his whiskers and the tips of his ears sticking up through the cream."

"O dear! If you had only one of my straws he could have dug out to," said the Broom.

"Perhaps so," replied the Mouse, as he wiped his eyes. "Another time a friend of mine fell into a pail and couldn't get out, and we could do nothing for him. He was then a prisoner, and we never saw him again."

"O horrors!" exclaimed the Cricket.

"And though Polly was so kind to us in some ways," continued the Mouse, "she was very cruel to me. I knew she had to scream and jump upon the table if one of us ran out on the floor."

"And so have I," said the Table, "to many a time."

"Come, come," said the Clock, as he struck twelve, "it is time to go to sleep. I'm going to take a nap myself, now I'll come to the snoring, and good night to all."

"I'll take home this reason for tomorrow," said the Trap.

"Do," said the Broom.

"Come again," chirped the Cricket.

"Come again," said the Mouse.

One of the "Personal" Advertisements and What Came of It.

New York Correspondence of the New Bedford Mercury.

One of the editorial staff of the Star inserted the following advertisement on the 19th of July in the Herald:

"A young lady of good family desired the acquaintance of a young gentleman of good standing and good personal appearance, with a view to ultimate marriage. She has a good marriage portion in her own right. The jealousy of a over-watchful guardian is the cause of this step. Address M. F., P. O. B. 169."

The result showed the preponderance

"Are you waiting for M. F. sir?" asked the little boy of the suspected individual.

"Yes," he answered with "slavery," "has sent a message?"

"She can't come before half-past two," said the unscrupulous party. Perfectly satisfied, the deeper thinker turned away from the door and settled himself in a seat near by—and waited.

By two, by three, and by half dozen the guests came in, until at length the Star and Register offices. The policeman began to gather around and wonder "what was up." Again and again was the little messenger despatched to the door, and at length a tall, portly, well-dressed man. Some of them were told to wait; others that M. F. would address them the next day in the Sunday Star.

The assembly was then passed before the assembly was eyed by them most anxiously. Now and then they eyed each other a little suspiciously, but none saw their way into the hall or went into their midst bearing a placard with the following written upon it:

"M. F. can't come to-day."

At last the speaker's fellows made tracks to parts unknown in his endeavor to describe. The hoax was self-evident, and their humiliation still greater the next day, when a full account of the ridiculous episode, and all the unpleasant things the group, appeared in the Sunday paper.

Pleasure on the Plains.

PHIL SHERIDAN, JAMES GORDON HENNETT, JR., AND OTHERS BOUND FOR THE PLAINS.

From the Omaha, (Nebr.) Herald, September 2.

Yesterday at 10.30 a. m., General Phil Sheridan and his party of friends, as previously announced in this paper, arrived in this city by the Chicago & Northwestern Railway. The company consists of General Sheridan, Major General James W. Western Union Telegraph, Chicago; Jas. Gordon Bennett, Jr., Lawrence Jerome, Leonard Jerome, General David, John D. Rockefeller, and light-colored traveling or business suit of citizen's clothes, and in manner representing what is generally known by the phrase "a pleasant gentleman." He is a country fellow. He is in the prime of life and evidently enjoys the full rank, pay and consideration which his distinguished military services have secured to him. He speaks, we think, the best English I ever heard of. We found him, like all sensible men, very cordial to the press and he explained to us the outline of his present trip. "I shall go," he said, "to Fort Porter, where I will travel across the country by the head waters of the Republican and Medicine. Several of our relatives never were out, and I want to get back home."

R.—It will be rough company for them?

General S.—Yes, but no party ever went west without being so equipped. We are everywhere, and the first good night we had here.

R.—Is this the best season?

General S.—Yes, the buffalo and antelope mate in the spring and separate; in summer, and the first good night we had here. This is the time to catch them.

He was then interrupted, but spoke again and laughed heartily at the comment of some of the reporters.

"They saw me have a red handkerchief," said he, "and they thought it was the thing for the plains, and they all have such."

LAWRENCE JEROME

is the eminent New York banker and financier of that name. He is a handsome man of a youthful appearance, and has the look and air of a successful man of the world of this age.

JAMES GORDON HENNETT

is the handsomest man in the party, and one of the luckiest men alive. He has in his early youth and without struggle attained all that other men have striven for, and he is now in the possession of the rare favorites of fortune. He is a tall, well-built young man, with a brown and pleasant-looking face. It is said that he has been in the army of France, and that he is familiar with the language and literature of all the nations of Europe, has a fair knowledge of the sciences, and is a general reader. He is a man who will be remembered, is the youngest who took his yacht over the ocean, and after he had beaten everything in England, of course, and then he sailed to Australia, the young royal sailor. He is now commodore of the New York Yacht Club and only a short time since his father gave him the New York Herald, which is valued at $100,000. He is a man who has distinguished party were yesterday in the heat of spirits. They were on a tour of pleasure, and they certainly meant to enjoy themselves, and we hope they may long continue to do so. They will be absent two or three weeks, and will return east by way of Fort Hayes and the Kansas Pacific.

Those That are Worn by our Belles.

The first shirts were made in Central Falls, Rhode Island, by a workman in one of the fax mills. For a number of years were used—the number of which were increased from 100,000 to 1,000,000. A firm in Providence commenced the manufacture, under the style of the Japanese Switch Company, manufacturing large quantities at prices between $8, raising the price, the profit to the manufacturer. Switches then retailed at $1.50 to $2, at now add at 25 to 37 cents. Several parties started in this city employ from 10 to 15 men, and the amount of money manufactured can be found from the experience of the largest city manufacturers, employing forty men, hatching

A Few Articles on Mining.

NO. IV.

To a novice in mining matters the rapid accumulation of fortunes, as reported, seems a phantom or an impossibility. They hear of the sudden wealth made from the oil business and regard it all as the result of a strike, without any respect to the business-talent and ability of the lucky man.

As one period in our history this was eminently true; to-day, however, the law of cause and effect is more apparent.

It is now notorious that San Francisco,

which has long been the operative center of western mining, has more extremely wealthy cities than any other city in the Union, although she is but an infant in years compared to others. Fifty-one of her citizens are millionaires, with fortunes running from $1,000,000 to $10,-

000,000; one is worth $750,000; sixtyone are worth $500,000; and upward of these immense fortunes have been gradually built up in the short period of fifteen years, from the unobtainable and non-fluctuation of their precious productions. If the oil that we produce could be made to bring its intrinsic value as compared with the other productions of the country, which would not be less than twenty dollars per barrel at the well, like permanent fortunes with those amassed by the western miner, would soon be built up in our midst. Even a majority of those who read mining journals are not aware that although the available surface deposits have been exhausted in California, so that the chances for ready strikes are greatly diminished, that nevertheless the profits and production of the permanent ledges of that state is steadily

on the increase from year to year.

The Comstock Ledge, in Nevada, one of the most wonderful deposits of mineral ever uncovered in the world, has already produced over $125,000,000 in silver, with various success to be made. Still the true character of this ledge is not the subject of universal opinion, but whether or not it may be ranked with the true fissure

THE GREAT MILLER FARM DOG TRAIL.

Strange indeed are the vagaries of the law, and he who seeks to gain redress for wrong or fancied wrong through the courts of justice often finds himself at the beginning of a series of troubles that, if they cease during the period usually allotted to human life, leave the participant penalties, or in worse condition than when he commenced. But over since Thomas Jefferson said "we hold these truths to be self-evident, that man is possessed of three inalienable rights, which are a wife, larger and the pursuit of horse thievery," there have been cases where a legal tribunal became necessary; especially so in a town devoid of clothes lines, trees and vigilance committees. Among the great cases that have been submitted to the law in the oil region there has occurred none that exceeded more universal interest, nor in the decision of which so much has been at stake, nor so many great principles involved, as the celebrated "dog case" of this city on Saturday afternoon. The circumstances of the crime are familiar to all, yet we give a brief review of the facts connected with the case.

Several months since, at Miller farm,

upon the Old Creek and Allegheny River

Railroad there were ushered into existence

at the office of the A. T. Company, a litter of five puppies as yet unglorified in the heart of a dog fancier, or owned nimbly over Tom Larson's flower-bed to the lascivious musings of a pig's shrill voice.

As time passed on the pups advanced through the successive stages of milk diet and distemper, to the more mature and slipper-donning period of canine existence, and the sixteen pups that (bored

the spirit) were born to a final basking in the sun, before long, only one, a splendid foundling dog, survived, and by his owner

the property of a genial, whole-souled individual, who then was serving as Assistant Superintendent on the Union and Titusville Railroad. (The following lines

from Bobbie Burns refer to the dog, not
